TransCultAA istraživanja
u Strossmayerovoј galeriji

TransCultAA research at the Strossmayer Gallery

Izložba TransCultAA istraživanja u Strossmayerovoj galeriji prezentira rezultate trogodišnjih znanstvenih istraživanja provedenih u međunarodnom ozračju projekta Transfer kulturnih dobara u regiji Alpe Jadran tijekom 20. stoljeća / Transfer of Cultural Objects in the Alpe Adria Region in the 20th Century (TransCultAA). TransCultAA je bio zajednički znanstvenoistraživački projekt četiriju istraživačkih timova iz četiriju zemalja (Njemačka, Italija, Slovenija, Hrvatska, uz pridružene partnerne iz Austrije), financiran u okviru programa HERA (Humanities in the European Research Area) na natječaju Uses of the Past 2016-2019.

Tim projektom multinacionalni tim istraživača u posve novim okvirima transnacionalne suradnje analizirao je 'uporabe prošlosti' u kontekstu kulturne baštine na području regije Alpe – Jadran, posebice s obzirom na konfliktne situacije vlasništva.

Unatoč izrazito regionalnom fokusu, projekt TransCultAA temeljio se na proučavanju posve opipljivih materijalnih posljedica procesa transfera, translokacija, izmjehantanja, konfiskacija, zapljena i krađa kulturnih dobara, koji su umnogome odredili cjelokupnu zajedničku europsku povijest odnosa prema kulturnoj baštini.

Glavna istraživačka pitanja tijekom rada na projektu bila su: tko je transferirao i translocirao koje predmete u regiji Alpe – Jadran, kada i zašto? Koja su objašnjenja, ako ikakva, (bila) dana za te postupke? Koji su se narativi u tu svrhu koristili i zašto? Kako arhivski dokumenti (iz regije, ali i iz širega područja, čiji su stvaratelji žrtve ili počinitelji, ili pak sudionici koje nije moguće jednoznačno odrediti) pomažu razumijevanju tih regionalnih i, prije svega, nacionalnih uporaba prošlosti?

Posebna pozornost u okviru istraživanja hrvatskog istraživačkog tima dana je onim dijelovima nekadašnje Jugoslavije koji su pripadali Italiji prije Drugoga svjetskog rata, potom dugotrajnim procesima restitucijskih pregovora nakon Prvoga i Drugoga svjetskog rata te redistribuciji kulturnih dobara ranijega židovskoga vlasništva koja je uslijedila nakon konfiskacija i zapljena tijekom Drugoga svjetskog rata, ali i mehanizmima razvlašćenja privatne imovine u socijalističkoj Jugoslaviji nakon 1945. godine.

Na izložbi su predstavljeni odabrani primjeri istraživanja okolnosti nabave i provenijencije umjetnina iz zbirnoga fonda Strossmayerove galerije za koje su zabilježeni transferi (vlasništva) tijekom 20. stoljeća. Uz rezultate povjesnoumjetničke obrade tih umjetnina, kao integralni dio spoznaja prezentirani su i neobjavljeni pisani i slikovni arhivski izvori, aukcijski katalozi te materijalni tragovi na umjetninama koji zorno predočavaju njihovu povijest ponajviše tijekom turbulentnog 20. stoljeća.

The exhibition TransCultAA research at the Strossmayer Gallery presents the results of a three-year long research process conducted in the international context of the project Transfer of Cultural Objects in the Alpe Adria Region in the 20th Century (TransCultAA). TransCultAA was a joint research and scientific project of four research teams from four countries (Germany, Italy, Slovenia, Croatia, with associate partners from Austria), financed by the HERA (Humanities in the European Research Area) program's grant application Uses of the Past 2016-2019.

With this project, a multinational team of researchers in completely new frameworks of transnational cooperation, analyzed the 'uses of the past' in the context of cultural heritage in the Alpe – Adria region, with special emphasis on conflicting ownership situations.

Despite its highlighted regional focus, the TransCultAA Project was based on researching the completely tangible material consequences of the processes of transfer, translocation, displacement, confiscation, seizure, and theft of cultural objects, which greatly determined the general mutual European historical attitudes towards cultural heritage.

The Project's main research questions were the following: who transferred and translocated which objects in the Alpe – Adria region, when and why? Which explanations, if any, were offered for those actions? Which narratives were used for those purposes and why? How can archival documents (from the region, but also from a wider area, whose creators were victims or perpetrators, or even participants who cannot be unequivocally determined) aid our understanding of those regional and, above all else, national uses of the past?

The Croatian research team paid special attention to those parts of the former Yugoslavia that belonged to Italy before the Second World War. Furthermore, we focused on the lengthy restitution negotiation processes that followed the First and Second World Wars, and the redistribution of cultural objects from previously Jewish ownership that followed the confiscations and seizures during the Second World War. Finally, we looked at the mechanisms of dispossessing private property that operated in Socialist Yugoslavia after the year 1945.

The exhibition presents selected research examples of the circumstances surrounding the acquisitions and provenance of artworks found in the holdings of the Strossmayer Gallery, for which we have recorded transfers (of ownership) during the 20th century. As an integral part of our understanding of these artworks, the results of their art-historical analyses are accompanied by unpublished written and photographic archival sources, auction catalogues, and material traces found on these artworks, which all vividly illustrate their history, especially during the turbulent 20th century.

Djelovanje Društva prijatelja Strossmayerove galerije, osnovanoga 1928. s ciljem da »Strossmayerovu galeriju slika u Zagrebu kao narodni idealni imutak neprecijenjive vrijednosti što bolje održi, sačuva, poveća i usavrši«, važno je za povijest Strossmayerove galerije prije svega zbog akvizicija koje je Društvo uspjelo ostvariti za Galeriju na tadašnjem domaćem i inozemnom tržištu umjetnina.¹

Nabave umjetnina isprva su tekle ustaljenim kanalima, kakvi su u to doba prevladavali na domaćem tržištu umjetnina. Uobičajen način nabave umjetnina bio je preko prodajnih izložbi, bilo onih koje su priredivali domaći slikari bilo pak gostujućih iz inozemstva. Društvo se međutim vrlo brzo orijentiralo na kupovine na međunarodnom tržištu, ponajviše zahvaljujući zalaganju svojih članova koji su i sami bili sakupljači umjetnina te su vrlo dobro poznavali umjetnička tržišta u susjednim većim središtima.

Ukupno je za vrijeme svoga djelovanja Društvo za Strossmayerovu galeriju nabavilo jedanaest slika, među kojima se kao iznimno bitna akvizicija ističe djelo Federika Benkovića, posljednjega velikoga schiacona, slikara podrijetlom s istočne obale Jadrana.² Slika Abraham žrtvuje Izaka izvorno je nastala za dvorac Pommersfelden, a kupljena je 1936. godine na londonskom tržištu umjetnina od talijanskoga trgovca Giuseppea Bellesija.³ Relativno slabo poznati small dealer, Giuseppe Bellesi u novije je vrijeme zamijećen u kontekstu suradnje s firentinskim sakupljačem i trgovcem Alessandrom Contini-Bonacossijem, preko kojega je velik broj slika koje je Bellesi intenzivno nabavljao na aukcijama u Christie's dospio u vlasništvo američkoga sakupljača Samuela H. Kressa.⁴

Benko Horvat, zaslužan za kupovine na talijanskom tržištu umjetninama realizirane krajem 1930-ih i početkom 1940-ih godina. I sam vješt i samostalan sakupljač, Horvat je odlučno inzistirao na nabavi slike Krist pada pod križem »i to sve i ako Uprava Galerije ne bi reflektirala na nju«.⁵ Slika se prodavala uz ekspertizu talijanskog povjesničara umjetnosti Giuseppea Fiocca, koji je sliku pripisao Federiku Benkoviću te zabilježio ime vlasnika (Fernando Sallario).⁶ Sačuvane su i Horvatove bilješke u kojima se navodi da je slika po »tradiciji samostana, odakle je nedavno [...] došla na svijetlo, bila pripisana Piazzetti«.⁷ Tko je Fernando Sallario, na koji je način slika i iz kojeg je samostana dospjela u njegov posjed, nije nam bilo moguće utvrditi.

U vrijeme Nezavisne Države Hrvatske Društvo prijatelja Strossmayerove galerije bilo je suočeno s cijelim nizom poteškoća u radu. Ustaška nadzorna služba već 10. rujna 1941. godine zahtijeva od Društva »dostavu popisa svih članova [...] i to sa svim generacijama«; osim imena i prezimena te zanimanja tražilo se da se navede »dan rodjenja, gdje, bračno stanje, vjera, zavičajnost, sadanje boravište itd.«, i to za sve tadašnje i bivše članove.⁸ Već tijekom travnja i svibnja 1941. godine mnogi su se članovi »spontano odreklji članstva« (S. D. Alexander, Rudolf Blis, Albert pl. Deutsch, Robert pl. Maceljski, Julije Mogan, Eugen Radovan, Robert Rosenberger, Ervin Weiss, Gejza i Saša Frank, Rikard Neumann, Milan Poljak), a neki su »brisani jer nepoznatog boravišta« (Milan Marić, Hinko Schwarz).⁹ Popis članova upravnog i nadzornog odbora Društva na kojem su mnoga imena precrvana¹⁰ zorno svjedoči o tragičnoj судбини mnogih pri-

Veliko osipanje članova uzrokovano ratnim i poratnim okolnostima dovelo je do spontanoga gašenja djelatnosti Društva. Tajniku Benku Horvatu 1947. godine nije preostalo nego utvrditi: »objizrom na to, da se je članstvo društva razisko, te ostalo bez ikakvih materijalnih sredstava [...] prestao je tako za društvo svaki 'raison d'etre'«.¹¹

The activities of the Society of Friends of the Strossmayer Gallery, founded in the year 1928 with the goal to »preserve, maintain, grow and perfect the Strossmayer Gallery of paintings in Zagreb as an ideal and invaluable national possession«, is important for the Strossmayer Gallery primarily because of the acquisitions that it managed to realize on the national and international art markets of the time.¹

Acquisitions of artworks were at first routine, in accordance with the operation of the national art market of the time. The usual way to acquire artworks was through auction sales, whether those organized by local painters, or by guests from abroad. However, the Society soon began to focus their acquisitions on the international market, mainly thanks to the commitment of its members, who were themselves art collectors, and had extensive knowledge of the art markets in larger neighboring centers.

During its active period, the Society acquired eleven paintings for the Strossmayer Gallery. Exceptionally important among these acquisitions was a painting by Federiko Benković, the last great Schiavone, a painter from the eastern coast of the Adriatic.² The painting Abraham sacrifices Isaac was originally created for the castle Pommersfelden, and was purchased in the year 1936 on London's art market from the Italian art dealer, Giuseppe Bellesi.³ A relatively poorly known small dealer, Giuseppe Bellesi has recently been noticed in the context of collaborating with the Florentine art collector and dealer, Alessandro Contini-Bonacossi. Through this contact, a large number of paintings that Bellesi intensively acquired at auctions held at Christie's came to be owned by American art collector, Samuel H. Kress.⁴

By the end of the 1930s, the initiative for new acquisitions was taken over by Benko Horvat, the Society's secretary. Horvat is responsible for acquisitions realized on the Italian art market at the end of the 1930s and beginning of the 1940s. As a skilled and independent art collector himself, Horvat was adamant to acquire the painting Christ falls under the Cross »even if the Gallery's Board did not strive to acquire it«.⁵ The painting was being sold with the expert opinion of Italian art historian Giuseppe Fiocco, who attributed it to Federiko Benković, and marked the name of its owner (Fernando Sallario).⁶ Horvat's notes have also been preserved, and state that the painting was »according to the history of the monastery, where it recently [...] came to light, was ascribed to Piazzetta«.⁷ We could not, however, determine who Fernando Sallario was, how he came to own the painting, and from which monastery it came into his possession.

During the regime of the Independent State of Croatia, the Society of Friends of the Strossmayer Gallery faced many difficulties in their work. As early as 10th September 1941, the Ustasha surveillance service demanded that the Society »deliver a list of all members [...] with all general information«; apart from their first and last names and occupations, members had to specify their »date of birth, place of birth, marital status, religion, nationality, current place of residence, etc.«. This was a requirement for both current and previous members.⁸ As early as April and May of 1941, many members »spontaneously gave up their membership« (S. D. Alexander, Rudolf Blis, Albert pl. Deutsch, Robert pl. Maceljski, Julije Mogan, Eugen Radovan, Robert Rosenberger, Ervin Weiss, Gejza and Saša Frank, Rikard Neumann, Milan Poljak), while others »were erased due to unknown places of residence» (Milan Marić, Hinko Schwarz).⁹ The list of members of the administration and oversight councils of the Society, on which many names are crossed out,¹⁰ vividly testifies to the tragic fate of many members of the elite civil society in Croatia at the time.

The great dispersal of members caused by wartime and post-war circumstances lead to the spontaneous termination of the Society's activities. In the year 1947, secretary Benko Horvat had nothing left but to determine: »considering that members of the society have dispersed, being left with no material assets [...] any 'raison d'être' for the society is therefore gone«.¹¹

Prvu nabavu slika europskih starih majstora Društvo prijatelja Strossmayerove galerije realiziralo je 1929., samo godinu dana nakon svoga osnutka, kada su kupljene dvije slike: Veselo društvo Jana Miensea Molenaera i Portret djevojke u perivoju Nicolaesa Maesa.¹² Slike potječu iz poznate zbirke bečkoga sakupljača Isidora Rittera von Klarwilla (1824. – 1898.), koji je na bečkom tržištu umjetninama tijekom sedamdesetih godina 19. stoljeća sakupio značajnu zbirku umjetnina pretežno nizozemskih i flamanskih slikara 17. stoljeća. Nakon smrti njegove supruge Henriette von Klarwill (1845. – 1927.) cijelovita je zbirka bila ponuđena na prodaju u Berlinu.¹³ Naslijednici su nakon berlinske aukcije nastavili s traženjem potencijalnih novih vlasnika obrativši se, među ostalima, i tadašnjem ravnatelju Strossmayerove galerije Arturu Schneideru. Iako je austrijski povjesničar umjetnosti Theodor von Frimmel osobito pohvalno pisao o slikama iz Klarwillove zbirke,¹⁴ Schneider je na samom početku kupoprodajnoga procesa zatražio sud o ponuđenim slikama i od njemačkoga povjesničara umjetnosti Maxa Jakoba Friedländera, koji je nakon razgleda slika u Berlinu ustvrdio da je »Molenaer: sonderlich richtig bestimmt, bedeutend, gut erhalten«, a »Maes: echt, spät, gut erhalten«.¹⁵ Tom je kuponom bitno obogaćena dotada zanemarena zbirka sjevernoeuropskoga slikarstva u Strossmayerovojo galériji, a napor koji je Schneider uložio u realizaciju te nabave bio je i u tadašnjem tisku prepoznat kao drugačiji pristup upravljanju zbirkom starih majstora Strossmayerove galerije.¹⁶

Slika Veselo društvo prodavana je s navodom o podrijetlu »aus einer adeligen Familie in Ungarn«,¹⁷ odnosno »aus dem Besitz eines Fürsten Esterhá-

zy«,¹⁸ no za sada nije bilo moguće potvrditi tu zvučnu provenijenciju. Na poleđini slike sačuvano je više brojčanih oznaka te pečat carine u Beču (»Zollamt Wien 45«) koji potvrđuje transport slike.

Za sliku Portret djevojke u perivoju moguće je utvrditi ranije kretanje na europskom tržištu umjetninama – 60-ih godina 19. stoljeća nalazila se u vlasništvu prodajne tvrtke Grundy & Smith u Manchesteru, kamo je mogla prispjeti u velikom valu interesa za Maesove slike koji su pokazali engleski sakupljači na početku 19. stoljeća.¹⁹

The Society of Friends of the Strossmayer Gallery realized its first acquisition of Old Master paintings in 1929, only a year after it was founded. The acquisition included two paintings: The merry company by Jan Miense Molenaer and Portrait of a girl in a garden by Nicolaes Maes.¹² The paintings come from the renowned collection of Viennese art collector, Isidor Ritter von Klarwill (1824 – 1898), who had collected a significant number of mostly Dutch and Flemish paintings from the 17th century during the 1870s' art market in Vienna. After the death of his wife, Henrietta von Klarwill (1845 – 1927), the entire collection was put up for auction in Berlin.¹³ After the Berlin auction, Klarwill's heirs continued to search for potential new owners for the collection, even contacting the director of the Strossmayer Gallery at the time, Artur Schneider. Although Austrian art historian Theodor von Frimmel wrote especially favorably about the paintings from the Klarwill Collection,¹⁴ at the very start of the acquisition process Schneider asked German art historian Max Jakob Friedländer for his opinion. Having examined at the paintings in Berlin, Friedländer decided that »Molenaer: sonderlich richtig bestimmt, bedeutend, gut erhalten«, and that »Maes: echt, spät, gut erhalten«.¹⁵ This acquisition significantly enriched the until then overlooked collection of Northern European paintings in the Strossmayer Gallery. The effort that Schneider invested into its realization was recognized by the press of the time as a different approach to managing the collection of Old Masters in the Strossmayer Gallery.¹⁶

The painting The merry company was sold with an accompanying note on its origin, which said »aus einer adeligen Familie in Ungarn«,¹⁷ that is »aus dem Besitz eines Fürsten Esterházy«,¹⁸ but it was not possible to confirm this grand provenance at the present. The back of the paintings preserves many numerical markings, and a stamp of the Vienna customs (»Zollamt Wien 45«), which confirms that the painting was indeed transported.

As for the painting Portrait of a girl in a garden, we can confirm that it had traveled the European art market – in the 1860s, it was owned by the auction company Grundy & Smith from Manchester, where it could have arrived on the large wave of interest exhibited by British art collectors for Maes' paintings at the beginning of the 19th century.¹⁹

Slika Sveti Sebastijan kupljena je, zajedno sa slikom Sveti Petar Mučenik, za zbirku biskupa Josipa Jurja Strossmayera u Miljanu 1872. godine.²⁰ Dvije slike venecijanskog renesansnog majstora Vittoreo Carpaccia povezuju se, kao dio iste oltarne cjeline izvorno u crkvi Santa Fosca u Veneciji, i sa slikom Sveti Rok s donatorom, koja je danas u Akademiji Carrara u Bergamu.²¹

Strossmayerove slike bile su izložene u stalnom postavu Galerije od otvaranja biskupove zbirke za javnost 1884. godine sve do 1942. godine, kada su »zakonskom odredbom o zamjeni [...] za krstionicu hrvatskog kneza Višeslava iz Museo Civico Correr u Mlecima« bile predane Italiji.²²

Tzv. Višeslavova krstionica bila je prenesena u Muzej Correr 1853. godine iz venecijanskog samostana Il Redentore.²³ U hrvatsku je historiografiju ušla kao krsni zdenac prvih hrvatskih narodnih vladara i datirala se u 9. stoljeće, uz tvrdnju da je izvorno bila smještена u Ninu kraj Zadra.²⁴

Svečana primopredaja krstionice upriličena je 13. kolovoza 1942. u atriju Hrvatske akademije znanosti i umjetnosti, a nedugo potom održan je mimohod učenika srednjih i pučkih škola grada Zagreba, koji je osmislio Ministarstvo nastave: »Mladež bi prošla u redu izpred palače Hrvatske akademije znanosti i umjetnosti, te gledanjem prema krstionici i propisnim dizanjem desne ruke na pozdrav odala dužnu počast.«²⁵ Bila je to pompozna javna priredba koja je trebala legitimirati kako režim Nezavisne Države Hrvatske tako i njezino savezništvo s fašističkom Italijom.²⁶

Prilikom zamjene 1942. godine Strossmayerova je galerija od Muzeja Correr dobila na poklon sliku Sveti Šimun, koja je bila dio ostavštine senatora Bartolomea Campana di Serana (1807. – 1887.). O njezinoj provenijenciji u zbirci Campana di Serano svjedoči i inventarna ceduljica venecijanskog muzeja još uvijek sačuvana na poleđini slike.

Problem povrata rješavao se u poratnim godinama u okviru dugotrajnih pregovora Vlade Federativne Narodne Republike Jugoslavije i Republike Italije o restituciji i vraćanju kulturnih dobara. Pregовори су zaključeni 1961. godine, nakon čega je Galeriji vraćena samo jedna slika, Sveti Sebastijan, dok je slika Sveti Petar Mučenik ostala u Muzeju Correr. Strossmayerova je galerija zadržala poklonjenu joj sliku Sveti Šimun, a Višeslavova krstionica, odnosno Krstionica svećenika Ivana danas je u Muzeju hrvatskih arheoloških spomenika u Splitu, kamo je bila otpremljena iz Akademije 1958. godine.²⁷ Još uvijek živi predmet istraživanja, taj je ranosrednjovjekovni spomenik u međuvremenu postao jednim od vizualnih simbola hrvatske povijesne državnosti.

27 Usp. Strossmayer Gallery – Museo Correr 2017.

The painting Saint Sebastian was acquired, along with the painting Saint Peter the Martyr, for the collection of Bishop Josip Juraj Strossmayer in Milan in the year 1872.²⁰ These two paintings, created by renaissance master painter Vittore Carpaccio from Venice, are linked as parts of the same altarpiece, originally housed in the Venetian church Santa Fosca. The painting Saint Rocco and Patron, today housed in the Carrara Academy in Bergamo, also formed a part of the same altarpiece.²¹

Strossmayer's paintings were exhibited in the Gallery's permanent collection since its opening for the public in the year 1884, until 1942 when they were given over to Italy based on the »legal provision to exchange it [...] for the Baptismal Font of Duke Višeslav from the Museo Civico Correr in Venice«.²²

The so-called Baptismal Font of Duke Višeslav was transferred to the Correr Museum in the year 1853 from the Venetian monastery Il Redentore.²³ It entered Croatian historiography as the baptismal font of the first Croatian national rulers, said to date from the 9th century. It has been claimed that it was originally housed in Nin, next to Zadar.²⁴

The ceremonial handover of the baptismal font was staged on 13th August 1942, in the courtyard of the Croatian Academy of Sciences and Arts. Soon after, a procession of elementary and high school students of Zagreb was organized by the Ministry of Education: »The youth would pass in a procession in front of the palace of the Croatian Academy of Sciences and Arts, and pay due respect by looking at the baptismal font and appropriately raising their right hands in salute.«²⁵ This was a pompous public performance whose aim was to legitimize the regime of the Independent State of Croatia, as well as its alliance with Fascist Italy.²⁶

During the 1942 exchange, the Correr Museum gave the Strossmayer Gallery the painting Saint Simeon as a gift. This painting formed part of the bequest of Senator Bartolomeo Campana di Serano (1807 – 1887). Its provenance in the Campana di Serano Collection is also testified to by the inventory label of the Venetian museum, still preserved on the back of the painting.

The restitution issue was resolved during the post-war years in the lengthy negotiations between the Government of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia and the Republic of Italy, which included the restitution and return of cultural heritage. The negotiations were concluded in the year 1961, after which only one painting was returned to the Gallery, Saint Sebastian. The painting Saint Peter the Martyr remained in the Correr Museum. The Strossmayer Gallery kept the painting Saint Simeon, which it had received as a gift, while the Baptismal Font of Duke Višeslav is today housed in the Museum of Croatian Archaeological Monuments in Split, where it was transferred from the Academy in 1958.²⁷ This early medieval monument has over the years become one of the visual symbols of Croatian historical nationality, and still remains a lively object of research.

Nedugo nakon uspostave Nezavisne Države Hrvatske u travnju 1941. godine uslijedilo je donošenje niza zakonskih odredbi vezanih uz zaštitu kulturne baštine, koje su korištene i kao 'pravno uporište' za oduzimanje umjetnina iz vlasništva režimu nepočudnih osoba.²⁸ Konzervatorski je zavod na osnovi Zakonske odredbe o zabrani otuđivanja i izvažanja starinskih umjetničkih, kulturno-povijesnih i prirodnih spomenika na području NDH donio odluku »da se svi predmeti umjetničke, kulturno-historijske i prirodne važnosti koji se nalaze u privatnom posjedu [...] imadu pregledati, popisati, te u slučaju nedovoljne zaštićenosti istih prenijeti u za to određene ustanove«.²⁹ Stvarna svrha popisivanja bila je pohranjivanje umjetničkih predmeta iz privatnog vlasništva u Hrvatski narodni muzej za umjetnost i obrt, koji je tijekom Drugoga svjetskog rata djelovao kao sabirni centar za pohranu umjetnina.³⁰ Nakon pohranjivanja umjetnina po kojnih, neprisutnih ili izbjeglih osoba tijekom 1941. godine, 1942. godine slijedile su prisilne pohrane.

Takva sudbina zadesila je i zbirku veletrgovca i industrijalca Roberta Deutscha Maceljskog (1884. – 1943.), koji je uz brata Gustava Maceljskog imao jedno od ključnih mjeseta u obiteljskom poduzeću Filipa Deutscha sinovi.³¹ Krajem svibnja 1941. godine započeto je popisivanje i fotografiranje umjetničkih predmeta u zbirci Roberta Deutscha Maceljskog, koju je u rujnu 1942. godine preuzeo Muzej za umjetnost i obrt.³² Robert Deutsch Maceljski sa suprugom je 1943. godine deportiran u Auschwitz, a njegova je zborka širokog umjetničkog raspona dočekala kraj

Drugoga svjetskoga rata u Muzeju za umjetnost i obrt.³³

Nakon rata, u novoj su jugoslavenskoj državi ostvareni novi transferi (vlasništva) umjetnina i njihova redistribucija primjenom različitih mehanizama razvlašćivanja privatnoga vlasništva (nacionalizacija, eksproprijacija, sekvestracija i konfiskacija).³⁴ Iz skladišta MUO-a u Strossmayerovu je galeriju pristiglo dvadeset i sedam slika starih majstora iz te zbirke.³⁵ Niz tih slika prepoznajemo na fotografijama stana Roberta Deutscha Maceljskog na Trgu N, današnjem Trgu žrtava fašizma.³⁶

Na jednom od zidova visjeli su redom portreti cara Rudolfa, Karla, Maksimilijana i Alberta. Serija habsburških vladara usklađena je bojom pozadine, impostacijom vladara udesno te natpisima uz gornji rub slike koji nose ime vladara, godine vladanja te godinu smrti vladara. Zajednička značajka portreta jest tamna odjeća s krznenim ogrtačem te znak reda Zlatnoga runa. Danas su ta četiri portreta razdijeljena između Muzeja za umjetnost i obrt i Strossmayerove galerije. Prije ulaska u Zbirku Deutsch Maceljski činili su dio opreme dvorca Bukovje (Pukštajn) kraj Dragovograda (Slovenija), koji se od početka 19. stoljeća nalazio u vlasništvu obitelji Kometer.³⁷ Barun Hans Kometer (1850. – 1925.) stvorio je u dvorcu jednu od najznačajnijih privatnih zbirki na slovenskom teritoriju.³⁸ Umjetnine je sakupljao na europskom tržištu umjetnina u skladu s tadašnjim sakupljačkim trendovima srednjoeuropskih aristokratskih obitelji. Cjelokupni posjed 1925. godine ostavio je svojoj nećakinji Meliti Feldman, koja je međutim ubrzo potom bankrotirala te bila primorana rasprodati umjetničke predmete na javnoj dražbi 1932. godine, prije koje je umjetnički inventar dvorca popisan i fotografiran.³⁹ Je li Robert Deutsch Maceljski osobno kupio četiri portreta ili su posredno ušli u njegovu zbirku, ostaje za sada nepoznato.

O sakupljačkoj aktivnosti Roberta Deutscha Maceljskog saznajemo iz njegova iskaza. Upravi Muzeja za umjetnost i obrt u Zagrebu ponudio je pružanje »svih podataka o mjestu nalaska i kupnje« napominjući da se u zbirci uglavnom nalaze »umjetnine domaćih starih majstora iz raznih krajeva naše domovine naročito Dalmacije, Zagorja i dr.«⁴⁰ Bitnu potvrdu takvoga podrijetla jedne od ikona pružaju cirilični natpisi u čijim se grafijskim specifičnostima razaznaju regionalne karakteristike zapadnoga tipa cirilice.

Posve nam nepoznata ostaje provenijencija slike Sveti Ivan Krstitelj s bratovštinom, nedavno priključene opusu slikara djelatnoga u radionici jednoga od bliskih Rafaelovih suradnika, Timotea Vitija iz Urbina.⁴¹ Okvir u kojem se slika danas čuva na sebi nosi informacije o podrijetlu umjetnine koja je njime bila opremljena, no one se ne odnose na sliku Sveti Ivan Krstitelj s bratovštinom. Naime, fotografija stana Deutsch Maceljski iz 1941. godine pokazuje da je okvir slike Sveti Ivan Krstitelj u međuvremenu zamijenjen. Nije nam poznata sudbina toga okvira, kao ni umjetnine kojoj je izvorno pripadao okvir u kojem je danas slika Krstitelja iz zbirke Roberta Deutscha Maceljskog.

Not long after the establishment of the Independent State of Croatia, in April 1941, an array of legal provisions concerned with the protection of cultural heritage was passed. These new rules served as legal grounding for the seizure of artworks owned by persons whom the regime found questionable.²⁸ Based on the Legal provision on the prohibition of alienating and exporting antique artworks, as well as cultural, historical and natural monuments on the territory of ISC, the Conservation Institute passed a decree »that all objects of artistic, cultural, historical and natural value found on private property [...] must be examined, recorded, and in case of their inadequate protection, transferred to appropriate institutions«.²⁹ The true purpose of these recordings was to house privately owned art objects in the Croatian National Museum of Arts and Crafts, which served as a center for gathering artworks during the Second World War.³⁰ After storing all artworks owned by deceased, missing, or displaced persons during the year 1941, the year 1942 saw the implementation of coercive storage.

This fate was also met by the art collection of wholesaler and industrialist, Robert Deutsch Maceljski (1884 – 1943), who, along with his brother Gustav, occupied one of the leading positions in the family's company Filip Deutsch's Sons.³¹ At the end of May 1941, actions were taken to record and photograph artworks found in Robert Deutsch Maceljski's collection, which was taken over by the Museum of Arts and Crafts in September of 1942.³² Robert Deutsch Maceljski and his wife were deported to Auschwitz in the year 1943, and his collection, comprising a wide array of artworks, saw the end of World War II in the Museum of Arts and Crafts.³³

After the war, the new state of Yugoslavia created new (ownership) transfers of artworks and their redistribution through the implementation of various dispossession mechanisms (nationalization, expropriation, sequestering, and confiscation).³⁴ The Strossmayer Gallery received twenty seven old master paintings from the depot of the Museum of Arts and Crafts, which used to form the Robert Deutsch Maceljski Collection.³⁵ Many of these paintings can be recognized on photographs of Robert Deutsch Maceljski's apartment on Trg N (Square N), today's Trg žrtava fašizma (Victims of Fascism Square).³⁶

One of the walls in the apartment carried the portraits of Emperors Rudolf, Carl, Maximilian, and Albert. The series of Habsburg rulers was synchronized in terms of the background color, positioning of the ruler to the right, and the banners that run along the upper edge of the painting, carrying the ruler's name, years in power, and year of death. A mutual characteristic of the portraits is the dark clothing and fur cape, along with the symbol of the Order of the Golden Fleece. Today, these four portraits are divided between the Museum of Arts and Crafts and the Strossmayer Gallery. Before entering the Deutsch Maceljski Collection, they formed part of the inventory of the Bukovje Castle (Pukštajn) near Dravograd (Slovenia), which had been in possession of the Kometer family since the 19th century.³⁷ Baron Hans Kometer (1850 – 1925) created one of the most significant private collections on Slovenian territory in this castle.³⁸ He collected his artworks on the European art market in line with the current trends of Central European aristocratic families. He left the entire estate to his niece, Melita Feldman, in the year 1925. However, she went bankrupt soon after, and forced to sell the artworks at a public auction in the year 1932. Prior to the auction, the entire inventory of the castle had been recorded and photographed.³⁹ Whether Robert Deutsch Maceljski personally bought the four portraits, or whether they found their way to his collection indirectly, remains unknown for now.

We learn of Robert Deutsch Maceljski's collecting activities from his own report. He had offered the administration of the Museum of Arts and Crafts in Zagreb insight into »all information concerning the locations where the artworks were found and bought«, mentioning that the collection mostly comprises »artworks by native old masters from various parts of our homeland, especially Dalmatia, Zagorje, etc.«⁴⁰ A significant confirmation of this kind of origin of one of the icons is offered by the Cyrillic inscriptions whose graphic specificities point to regional characteristics of Western Cyrillic.

The provenance of the painting Saint John the Baptist and Brethren, recently added to the oeuvre of a painter active in the workshop of one of Raphael's close collaborators, Timoteo Viti of Urbino, remains completely unknown to us.⁴¹ The frame in which the painting is kept today retains information on the origin of the painting that it used to furnish, but they do not pertain to our painting of Saint John the Baptist. Namely, a photograph of the Deutsch Maceljski apartment from the year 1941 shows that the frame of Saint John the Baptist and Brethren was changed in the meantime. We do not know the fate of that frame, nor of the artwork to which the current frame of our painting from the Robert Deutsch Maceljski Collection originally belonged.

Četiri slike ljubljanskog baroknog slikara Joannes-a Eisenharta s oltara Blažene Djevice Marije iz stare zagrebačke katedrale na Kaptolu u zbirnome su fondu Strossmayerove galerije od 1950. godine, kada su u muzejskoj dokumentaciji evidentirane kao »nabavljene od« Gustava Maceljskog.⁴²

Eisenhart je naslikao oltarne cikluse Blažene Djevice Marije i svetoga Ladislava za bočne brodove barokizirane zagrebačke pravoslavnice.⁴³ Oba oltara sadržavala su po 12 slikanih prizora. Po četiri obostrano slikane daske činile su pomicna krila oltara, a na fiksnim vanjskim bočnim krilima nalazila su se još četiri slikana prizora.

Nakon devastirajućeg potresa u Zagrebu 1880. godine interijer katedrale temeljito se obnavlja, a oltar Blažene Djevice Marije i oltar svetoga Ladislava, uz mnoge druge barokne oltare, izbacuju se te zamjenjuju novima.⁴⁴ Tom prilikom mnogi su od starih oltara rastavljeni i fragmentirani, a određenom se broju pripadajućih im slika gubi trag.⁴⁵

Slikama Marijina ciklusa ne nalazimo traga tijekom idućih gotovo pola stoljeća, sve do 1925. godine. Tada se dvije obostrano slikane daske s tog oltara pojavljuju na izložbi prigodom 1000. godišnjice Hrvatskog Kraljevstva (925. – 1925.). U katalogu izložbe slike su navedene kao vlasništvo zagrebačkog Kaptola.⁴⁶

Nakon 1925. godine te dvije obostrano slikane daske raspiljene su u odvojene slike. U kampanji fotodokumentiranja hrvatske spomeničke baštine Artur Schneider zabilježio ih je 1938. godine kao četiri pojedinačne slike u vlasništvu Gustava Maceljskog.⁴⁷ Nije poznato od koga ih je, u kojem obliku i kada točno, svakako između 1925. i 1938. godine, Gustav Maceljski nabavio.

Potomak ugledne židovske obitelji, Gustav Maceljski (1882. – 1965.) bio je istaknuti član društvene zajednice i voditelj obiteljske tvrtke za preradu drva Filipa Deutscha sinovi.⁴⁸ Mnogobrojni članovi židovske porodice Deutsch Maceljski stradali su u Drugome svjetskom ratu.⁴⁹ Gustav Maceljski preživio je ratne strahote, no kraj ustaškog režima dočekao je znatno osiromašen. Po završetku rata vlasti novouspostavljene Jugoslavije zaplijenile su mu i preostalu imovinu.⁵⁰ Okolnosti pod kojima su 1950. godine četiri slike Marijina ciklusa iz stare zagrebačke katedrale »nabavljene« od Gustava Maceljskog za Strossmayerovu galeriju ostaju nerazjašnjene.⁵¹

Four paintings by baroque painter Joannes Eisenhart from Ljubljana, that comprised the Altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary from the old Zagreb Cathedral on Kaptol, have been in the holdings of the Strossmayer Gallery since the year 1950, when they were listed in the museum's records as »acquired from« Gustav Maceljski.⁴²

Eisenhart painted the altar cycles of the Blessed Virgin Mary and Saint Ladislaus for the side aisles of Zagreb's Cathedral that had been renovated in the baroque style.⁴³ Each altar contained 12 painted scenes. Four of them were wooden panels painted on both sides that formed the altar's moveable wings. The outer fixed panels carried another four painted scenes.

After the devastating earthquake that shook Zagreb in the year 1880, the Cathedral's interior was thoroughly rebuilt. The altars of the Blessed Virgin Mary and Saint Ladislaus were thrown out and replaced with new ones, which was the fate of many of the Cathedral's baroque altars.⁴⁴ On this occasion, many of the old altars were dismantled and fragmented, while a certain number of their paintings has been lost.⁴⁵

Paintings from the cycle of Mary remained lost for the next almost half a century, until the year 1925. That is when two wooden panels painted on both sides from the altar appeared at the exhibition commemorating the 1000th anniversary of the Croatian Kingdom (925 – 1925). The exhibition catalogue lists them as the property of the Zagreb Archbispopric.⁴⁶

After the year 1925, those two wooden panels painted on both sides were sawed into separate paintings. In his campaign designed to photographically document Croatian monuments, Artur Schneider recorded them in the year 1938 as four individual paintings owned by Gustav Maceljski.⁴⁷ It is unknown from whom, in what form and when Maceljski acquired them, but it must have been sometime between the years 1925 and 1938.

A descendant of a reputable Jewish family, Gustav Maceljski (1882 – 1965) was a distinguished member of society who managed his family's wood processing plant, *Filip Deutsch's Sons*⁴⁸. Many members of the Jewish family Deutsch Maceljski perished in the Second World War.⁴⁹ Gustav Maceljski had survived the atrocities of war, only to see the end of the political regime of the Independent State of Croatia as an impoverished man. At the end of the war, the newly established Yugoslavian government seized the remains of his property.⁵⁰ The circumstances under which the four paintings from the Cycle of Mary from Zagreb's old Cathedral were »acquired« from Gustav Maceljski for the Strossmayer Gallery remain unexplained.⁵¹

The redistribution of sequestered property
after the Second World War
.....

Preustrojem jugoslavenske državne uprave početkom 1950-ih, poslove Ministarstva kulture preuzimaju novoformirani savjeti na saveznoj i republičkim razinama. Njihove su ovlasti obuhvaćale i distribuciju izvlaštenih umjetnina muzejima. U suradnji s nadležnim Konzervatorskim zavodom Savjet je raspoređivao 'zaostale' sekvestrirane umjetnine, uglavnom židovskoga podrijetla. Tako je 1958. godine u Strossmayerovu galeriju dospjela i slika Polaganje u grob venecijanskoga slikara Jacopa Palme Ml., nekada u vlasništvu Eduarda Polaka u Rijeci.⁵²

Poticaj za smještaj slike u Strossmayerovu galeriju dao je povjesničar umjetnosti Grgo Gamulin, koji je tada bio član Odbora za umjetničke galerije, savjetodavnoga tijela osnovanoga pri Savjetu za kulturu i nauku. U dopisu Savjetu Gamulin piše: »U prostorijama Biskupije u Rijeci nalazi se u pohrani slika Palme Mladega, Polaganje u grob. Slika je bila vlasništvo jednog Jevrejina, koji je, znajući za sudbinu koja ga čeka, za vrijeme rata, predao sliku na čuvanje Biskupu riječkom. Taj nekadašnji vlasnik je za vrijeme rata stradao, a nikakvog nasljednika nije ostavio. Mislim da slika treba da dođe u državno vlasništvo i da se mora u tom smislu inicirati postupak. [...] po svojoj vrijednosti i značenju ona [slika] spada u Strossmayerovu galeriju [...].«⁵³

Poznato je ponešto i o ranijoj provenijenciji slike. Godine 1920. bila je ponuđena na prodaji ostavštine austrijskoga slikara Friedricha von Amerlinga, no kako se i kada u Amerlingovoј zbirci našla ta velika oltarna pala, ostaje nepoznato.⁵⁴ U bečkim novinama Internationale Sammler-Zeitung objavljen je osrvt na Amerlingovu aukciju koji donosi i rezultate prodaje slike Polaganje u grob: »Verhältnismäßig billig war die 'Grablegung Christi' von Palma Giovane (Nr. 58), die bei einer Bewertung von K 80 000 für 70 000 nach Fiume ging.«⁵⁵ Podatak o prodaji slike u Rijeku važna je karika u utvrđivanju provenijencije slike, no je li ju njezin posljednji vlasnik Eduardo Polak izravno kupio na dražbi 1920. ili ju je pak nabavio poslije i pod kojim okolnostima, nije bilo moguće utvrditi.

Eduardo Polak bio je vlasnik tvornice Ljuštionica riže u Rijeci koja je uspješno poslovala sve do rata.⁵⁶ Prepoznajemo ga u bazi podataka talijanskih žrtava holokausta 1943.-45., gdje je evidentiran kao Edoardo Pollak, sin Carla Pollaka, rođen u Osijeku 8. studenoga 1876., uhićen u Rijeci, stradao u nacističkom logoru Risiera di San Sabba u Trstu.⁵⁷

The reorganization of the Yugoslavian government administration at the beginning of the 1950s meant that the activities conducted by the Ministry of Culture were taken over by newly established councils on the state and republic levels. Their responsibilities also included the distribution of dispossessed artworks that ended up in museums. In cooperation with the responsible Conservation Institute, the council distributed the 'remaining' sequestered artworks, mostly of Jewish origin. In the year 1958, the Strossmayer Gallery became the recipient of the painting Entombment by Venetian painter Jacopo Palma Giovane, which was once owned by Eduardo Polak from Rijeka.⁵²

The incentive to house the painting in the Strossmayer Gallery was given by art historian Grgo Gamulin, who was at the time a member of the Board for Art Galleries, an advisory board formed by the Council for Culture and Science. In his letter to the Council, Gamulin writes: »The facilities of the Bishopric in Rijeka hold the painting Entombment by Palma Junior. The painting was owned by a Jew who, knowing the fate that awaited him during the war, gave the painting to the Bishop of Rijeka for safekeeping. This previous owner perished during the war, leaving no heir. I believe that the painting should become government property and that this process must be initiated. [...] based on its value and significance, it [the painting] belongs to the Strossmayer Gallery [...].«⁵³

Something of the painting's earlier provenance is also known. In the year 1920, it was offered at the estate sale of Austrian painter Friedrich von Amerling, but how this large altarpiece found its way to his collection remains unknown.⁵⁴ The Viennese newspaper Internationale Sammler-Zeitung published a review of Amerling's auction that also offers the sale results of the painting Entombment: »Verhältnismäßig billig war die 'Grablegung Christi' von Palma Giovane (Nr. 58), die bei einer Bewertung von K 80 000 für 70 000 nach Fiume ging.«⁵⁵ Information on the sale of the painting to Rijeka is an important link in the painting's provenance chain. However, whether its last owner, Eduardo Polak, bought it directly at the auction of 1920, or acquired it sometime later, and under which circumstances, proved impossible to determine.

Eduardo Polak was the owner of the factory Ljuštionica riže in Rijeka which operated successfully until the war.⁵⁶ We can recognize him in the database of Italian victims of the holocaust 1943-45, where he is listed as Edoardo Pollak, son of Carlo Pollak, born in Osijek on 8th November 1876, arrested in Rijeka, died in the Nazi camp Risiera di San Sabba in Trieste.⁵⁷

intriguing provenance

Slika Kartaši Pietera J. Quasta u više je navrata bila predstavljana u okviru projekta TransCultAA, ne samo u znanstvenim publikacijama i izlaganjima već i u dnevnom tisku.⁵⁸ Razlog tome jest iznimno interesantna provenijencija slike u 20. stoljeću, koja povezuje istaknute protagoniste europskoga tržišta umjetninama. Komparativnim istraživanjem cijelogona niza raznorodnih izvora utvrđeno je kretanje slike od Nizozemske preko Engleske, međuratne Jugoslavije, potom Beča i Hitlerova skladišta umjetnina u rudniku soli Altaussee kraj Salzburga do Beograda i Zagreba.

Strossmayerova je galerija sliku Kartaši preuzela 1948. godine od Komiteta za kulturu i umjetnost iz Beograda.⁵⁹ Slika se 1919. godine nalazila u vlasništvu Jacquesa Goudstikkera (1897. – 1940.), jednoga od najvažnijih nizozemskih trgovaca umjetninama starih majstora između dva svjetska rata.⁶⁰ Tada je u dva navrata bila ponuđena na prodaju, u Rotterdamu i u Den Haagu.⁶¹ Potom je prije 1930. godine zabilježena u vlasništvu londonske izložbeno-prodajne galerije Dowdeswell and Dowdeswell Ltd sa sjedištem u New Bond Streetu.⁶²

Pred sam kraj Drugoga svjetskoga rata, 1944. godine, našla se na prodaji bečke aukcijske kuće *Dorotheum*⁶³ koja je tada djelovala pod nacističkom upravom preuzevši monopol nad prodajom umjetnina oduzetih židovskim obiteljima i zaplijenjenima na okupiranim područjima.⁶⁴ Dorotheum je bio glavni partner posebne misije, tzv. Sonderauftrag Linz, čiji je cilj bio prikupljanje umjetnina za Führerov muzej u

Linzu. Umjetnine koje bi Sonderauftrag Linz odabirao na aukcijama bile su uskladištene u posebnom Dorotheumovu spremištu, a potom bi bile slane u München.⁶⁵ Međutim, od ljeta 1944. godine umjetnine iz Dorotheumovih spremišta prebacuju se u rudnik soli Altaussee pokraj Salzburga, a tu je sudbinu doživjela i slika Kartaši. Kao nekadašnja »jugoslavenska svojina« zatečena je 1946. godine među slikama koje je Dorotheum deponirao u rudniku, te predana predstavnicima Jugoslavije zajedno s osobnom imovinom Ante Pavelića, poglavnika Nezavisne Države Hrvatske (1941. – 1945.).⁶⁶ Na primopredajnim je dokumentima označena brojem 215-528-14, koji je do danas sačuvan na njezinoj poleđini. Čini se međutim da su ostale oznake na poleđini slike namjerno uništene kako bi se prikrili tragovi ranije provenijencije.

Slika Kartaši jedina je umjetnina koju je Dorotheum evidentirao kao nabavljenu u Jugoslaviji,⁶⁷ međutim kako je točno i kada ta aukcijska kuća došla u posjed slike ostaje nepoznato. Pretpostavljena jugoslavenska provenijencija dodatno intrigira s obzirom na utvrđeno kretanje slike na tržištu umjetninama u Nizozemskoj i Engleskoj.

The painting The Card Players by Pieter J. Quast has been presented by the TransCultAA Project several times, not only in scientific publications, but also in lectures and the daily press.⁵⁸ The reason behind this is the extremely intriguing provenance of the painting during the 20th century, which connects prominent protagonists of the European art market. A comparative study of a whole array of various sources has confirmed the trajectory of the painting from The Netherlands, through England, Yugoslavia between the wars, then Vienna and Hitler's warehouse of art in the Altaussee salt mines near Salzburg, and finally to Belgrade and Zagreb.

The Strossmayer Gallery received the Cardplayers in the year 1948 from the Committee for Culture and Art in Belgrade.⁵⁹ In the year 1919, it was in the possession of Jacques Goudstikker (1897 – 1940), one the most significant Dutch art dealers between the two world wars, who focused on Old Master paintings.⁶⁰ Then, the painting was offered for sale on two occasions, in Rotterdam and in Den Haag.⁶¹ Afterward, prior to the year 1930, it was recorded among the property of London's auction gallery, Dowdeswell and Dowdeswell Ltd, located on New Bond Street.⁶²

By the end of the Second World War, in the year 1944, the painting appeared at an auction organized by the Viennese auction house *Dorotheum*⁶³ which at the time operated under Nazi administration, assuming monopoly over the sale of artworks taken from Jewish families and confiscated in occupied areas.⁶⁴ The Dorotheum was the main partner of a special, the so-called 'Sondertauftrag Linz', whose aim was to gather artworks for the Führer's museum in Linz. The artworks that Sonderauftrag Linz would choose at auctions would be stored in a special storeroom at the Dorotheum, after which they would be shipped to Munich.⁶⁵ However, by the summer of 1944, artworks from the Dorotheum storerooms were transferred to the Altaussee salt mine near Salzburg, a fate shared by the The Card Players. As former »Yugoslav property«, it was found in the year 1946 among the paintings that the Dorotheum had stored in the salt mine, and handed over to Yugoslavian representatives, along with the personal belongings of Ante Pavelić, Head of the Independent State of Croatia (1941 – 1945).⁶⁶ On the handover documents, the painting is marked with the number 215-528-14, which has been preserved on its back until this day. However, it seems that other markings from the back of the painting were purposefully destroyed in order to hide traces of its earlier provenance.

The painting The Card Players is the only artwork that the Dorotheum registered as acquired in Yugoslavia.⁶⁷ However, how and when that auction house came to possess it remains unknown. The assumed Yugoslavian provenance intrigues us even further considering the painting's trajectory through the art markets of The Netherlands and England.

Dvorci plemičkih obitelji u Hrvatskoj već su za vrijeme Drugog svjetskog rata – a ponajviše u razdoblju neposrednog porača – došli pod udar novih državnih vlasti. Premda je u svakom pojedinom slučaju podržavljenja imovine prijeratnih nositelja društvenoga poretku režim nastojao dokazati njihov crimen – opravdavajući time svoje postupke – zapravo se radilo o sustavnom izvlašćivanju obitelji koje su »prekomjerno nagomilale bogatstvo«, a što je nerijetko pratio i njihov izgon iz zemlje.

Predmeti umjetničke vrijednosti izdvajaju se od ostale podržavljene imovine i o njima brigu preuzima novoosnovana Komisija za sakupljanje i zaštićivanje kulturnih spomenika i starina, tzv. KOMZA.⁶⁸ Vrijednu umjetničku i kulturnu građu iz hrvatskih dvoraca i drugih objekata diljem zemlje prenosila je u sabirne centre. Sjedište KOMZA-e i glavni centar za pohranu umjetnina prikupljenih na širem zagrebačkom području nalazili su se u prostorima Muzeja za umjetnost i obrt. Nakon prikupljanja umjetnina slijedila je njihova redistribucija te one konačno završavaju u više muzejskih i drugih javnih institucija.

KOMZA-inim je djelovanjem u Strossmayerovu galeriju starih majstora u razdoblju porača prispjelo više desetaka slika starih majstora. Među njima su i ovdje prezentirane umjetnine iz prijeratnoga vlasništva plemičkih obitelji Drašković i Ottenfels-Gschwind, koje su u mnogočemu obilježile hrvatsku povijest i kulturu.

Iz podravskog dvorca Veliki Bukovec, koji je godine 1992. vraćen potomcima obitelji Drašković, u Strossmayerovu galeriju 1947. godine stiže slika Sveti Marija Magdalena. Do završetka Drugog svjetskog rata slika se nalazila u velikobukovečkoj dvorskoj kapeli, a u Zagreb je prenosi upravo KOMZA. Slika na poleđini nosi KOMZA-inu oznaku koja se sastoji od kombinacije brojeva i slova. Istom oznakom slika je evidentirana u zapisniku primopredaje Strossmayerovoj galeriji⁶⁹ i u prvotnom KOMZA-inu zapisniku sastavljenom u dvoru Veliki Bukovec u veljači 1946. godine.⁷⁰ Elementi takvih oznaka označavaju lokaciju i vrijeme kad su umjetninu preuzeли KOMZA-ini dječatnici: prvi dio oznake »74/46 107« s poleđine slike Sveti Marija Magdalena upućuje na KOMZA-in zapisnik iz Velikoga Bukovca kojem je dodijeljen broj 74 u 1946. godini, a broj 107 označava redni broj umjetnine na popisu inventara u prilogu zapisnika.

Iz zagorskog dvorca Trakošćan, drugog u nizu dvorca koji su bili u prijeratnom vlasništvu obitelji Drašković, potječe slika Mrtva priroda, iznimno djelo popularnog slikarskog žanra nizozemskog zlatnog doba. Na provenijenciju slike upućuje oznaka »TRAK 11« na njezinoj poleđini. Elementi te oznake međutim ne odgovaraju uobičajenim KOMZA-inim oznakama niti sliku nalazimo na KOMZA-inim popisima sastavljenima u dvoru Trakošćan. Mogući je razlog upravo vrijednost slike, odnosno svijest vlasnika o potrebi da sliku na vrijeme skloni, odnosno zaštiti od ratnih zbivanja. U putnome izvještaju Zemaljske komisije za utvrđivanje ratne štete na kulturno-historijskim spomenicima za Hrvatsku sastavljenome u Trakošćanu navedeno je: »Tokom rata nalazile su se u Trakošćanu povremeno njemačke, ustaške, čerkeške i partizanske trupe uz višekratnu medjusobnu izmjenu [...] Šteta koju je dvor pretrpio odnosi se medjutim na inventar. Dio najvrednijeg materijala prenio je opuštenočnik vlasnika dvorca g. Janko Vranicani Dobrovnić još prije oslobođenja u Zagreb i pohranio ga u Muzeju za umjetnost i obrt.«⁷¹

Iz zagorskog dvorca Bežanca, koji je do upada partizana 1943. godine i ubojstva grofa Franje Ottenfels-Gschwinda bio u posjedu te plemenitaške obitelji austrijskih korijena, potječe portret muškarca. Natpisom na poleđini slike portretirani je identificiran kao francuski plemić i veliki sudac kastelanije Baille-

Detail of the back of the painting Still Life

The castles of noble Croatian families had already come under the impact of the newly established government during the Second World War, and especially in the period immediately after it. Although each case of nationalized property that used to be owned by the previous regime was used as an example to prove guilt – validating the new regime's activities – what was actually being achieved was a systematic dispossession of families that »hoarded their wealth«, which was frequently followed by their exile from the country.

Objects of artistic value were separated from other nationalized property, and placed in the care of the newly established Commission for gathering and protection of cultural monuments and antiques, the so-called KOMZA.⁶⁸ More valuable objects of art and culture found in Croatian castles and other locations around the country was transferred to gathering centers. KOMZA's headquarters and main gathering center for artworks collected in the wider area of Zagreb were established in the facilities of the Museum of Arts and Crafts. Once the artworks were gathered there, they were redistributed, ending up in various museums and other public institutions.

KOMZA's activities in the post-war period led to several dozen Old Master paintings being transferred to the Strossmayer Gallery. Among them were the artworks presented here, which came from the property of the noble families Drašković and Ottenfels-Gschwind. These families marked Croatian history and culture in many ways.

The Castle of Veliki Bukovec, located in the Podravina region, was returned to the heirs of the Drašković family in the year 1992. But before that, in the year 1947, the painting Saint Mary Magdalene was taken from the castle and transferred to the Strossmayer Gallery. Until the end of World War II, the painting hung in the castle's chapel, from where it was taken to Zagreb by KOMZA members. On the back of the painting we can see KOMZA's marking, comprised of a combination of numbers and letters. The same marking was used to register the painting in the record of transfer to the Strossmayer Gallery,⁶⁹ as well as in the first record that KOMZA compiled in the Castle of Veliki Bukovec in February of 1946.⁷⁰ Parts of these markings signify the location and time of the takeover conducted by KOMZA representatives: the first part of the marking »74/46 107« on the back of the painting Saint Mary Magdalene references KOMZA's record from Veliki Bukovec, to which the number 74 was assigned in the year 1946, while the number 107 signifies the order according to which artworks were listed on the inventory list found in the record's appendix.

The Trakošćan Castle, the second in the lineup of castles owned by the Drašković family before the war, housed the painting Still life, a remarkable painting of the popular painting genre from the Dutch golden age. The painting's provenance is indicated by the marking »TRAK 11« found on its back. However, parts of this marking do not correspond with the usual signification system used by KOMZA, nor is the painting found on any records compiled by KOMZA representatives in the Trakošćan Castle. A possible reason for this is the painting's value, which prompted its owner to hide it on time and protect it from the activities of war. The tour report of the National Committee for War Damage Assessment on Cultural and Historical Monuments compiled for Croatia in the Trakošćan Castle reads: »During the war, Trakošćan occasionally housed German, Ustasha, Circassian, and Partisan military troops, with several interchanges [...] The damage this caused to the castle is however suffered by the inventory. A part of the most valuable material was transferred to the Museum of Arts and Crafts by the owner's proxy, Mr.

The Bežanec Castle in the region of Zagorje, which had been owned by Count Franjo Ottenfels-Gschwind and his noble Austrian family until the year 1943, when it was stormed by Partisan troops who killed its owner, housed a portrait of a man. A label on the back of the painting identifies the man in the portrait as the French nobleman and grand judge of the Bailleul County, François-Louis-Joseph du Mont (1688 – 1776).⁷² KOMZA took the painting from the castle in the year 1945, after which it was transferred to the Museum of Arts and Crafts in Zagreb. It arrived to the Strossmayer Gallery in 1947.

Slike Rasipni sin i Luka u Holandiji nekoć su se nalazile u vlasništvu Ervina Weissa (1891. – 1964.), zagrebačkoga industrijalca i u međuratnom periodu direktora Trbovljanskoga ugljenokopa.⁷³

Prilikom sklapanja braka s Brankom rođ. Huth, Weiss je 1925. godine prešao na katoličanstvo.⁷⁴ Po uspostavi Nezavisne Države Hrvatske njegova je umjetnička zbirka u stanu na drugom katu Boškovićeve ulice br. 2 bila popisana i fotografirana te stavljena pod nadležnost Konzervatorskoga zavoda.⁷⁵ Ipak, Weissova zbirka ne dijeli sudbinu većine židovskih zbirki koje su dobrovoljno ili prisilno bile pohranjene u Muzeju za umjetnost i obrt. Nakon rata zbirka je iznova evidentirana u prostorijama njegova stana te je zaštićena i ubrzo je dobila status privatne zbirke javnoga karaktera.⁷⁶ Međutim 1949. godine imovina Ervina Weissa sekvestirana je te potom konfiscirana i razdijeljena među više muzejskih ustanova u Zagrebu.⁷⁷ U fundusu Strossmayerove galerije šesnaest je slika iz zbirke Weiss.⁷⁸

Ervin Weiss svoju je zbirku slika starih majstora većim dijelom formirao u Beču, preko aukcijske kuće Auktionshaus für Altertümer Glückselig.⁷⁹ Sliku Luka u Holandiji aukcijska kuća Glückselig prodavala je 1927. godine na dražbi umjetnina iz ostavštine Viktora (1865. – 1919.) i Helene Mautner-Markhof (u. 1926.), predstavnikā ugledne bečke obitelji s dugom tradicijom u proizvodnji piva.⁸⁰ Početna i postignuta cijena anotirane su u katalogu koji se danas čuva u knjižnici Nizozemskog instituta za povijest umjetnosti u Den Haagu: 6.000, odnosno 5.800 šilinga. Anotacija ne sadrži ime kupca, no s velikom sigurnošću možemo ustvrditi da je kupovinu na toj aukciji realizirao Ervin Weiss, s obzirom na svoje višestruke veze s aukcijskom kućom Glückselig. Iako se od 1952. godine nalazi u Strossmayerovo galeriji, slika Luka u Holandiji amsterdamskoga slikara Jacobusa Storka u stranoj se literaturi i nadalje navodi s podatkom prodaje iz 1927. godine bez navoda sadašnjega smještaja.⁸¹

Na poleđini slike flamanskoga slikara Christoffela van der Laemena Rasipni sin nalazi se nekoliko oznaka, koje su međutim u lošem stanju očuvanosti. Jedna od njih srodnja je oznaci austrijskoga Bundesdenkmalamta kojim je Savezna služba za zaštitu spomenika u periodu 1923. – 1934. odobravala izvoz umjetnina s austrijskog teritorija. Budući da svi elementi nisu jasno čitljivi, ceduljicu možemo samo uvjetno povezati s austrijskim tržištem toga razdoblja. Identificirati je moguće samo oznaku pripadnosti zbirci Weiss: plava okrugla markica s bijelim slovima »ERVIN WEISS ZAGREB« i crvenim brojem 414 u sredini, kakovom je Weiss običavao bilježiti poledine svojih umjetnina.

The paintings The prodigal son and Holland Harbor were once owned by Ervin Weiss (1891 – 1964), an industrialist from Zagreb, who served as director of the coalmine in Trbovlje between the wars.⁷³

Because of his marriage to Branka neé Huth, Weiss switched to Catholicism in the year 1925.⁷⁴ After the establishment of the Independent State of Croatia, his art collection, located in an apartment on the second floor of Boškovićeva Street no. 2, was recorded, photographed, and placed under the jurisdiction of the Conservation Institute.⁷⁵ However, Weiss' collection does not share the fate of most Jewish art collections that were voluntarily or forcibly stored in the Museum of Arts and Crafts. After the war, the collection was recorded again in the same apartment and protected, quickly gaining the status of a private collection of public character.⁷⁶ However, in the year 1949 Ervin Weiss' property was sequestered, confiscated, and distributed among several museum institutions in Zagreb.⁷⁷ The holdings of the Strossmayer Gallery currently house sixteen paintings from the Weiss Collection.⁷⁸

Ervin Weiss created his collection of Old Master paintings mainly in Vienna, through the auction house Auktionshaus für Altertümer Glückselig.⁷⁹ The painting A port in Holland was offered by the auction house Glückselig in 1927 at the auction of artworks from the estate of Viktor (1865 – 1919) and Helena Mautner-Markhof (d. 1926), representatives of a respected Viennese family with a long tradition in the beer brewing business.⁸⁰ The starting and final price were annotated in a catalogue that has been preserved until this day in the library of the Dutch Institute of Art History in Den Haag: 6.000 and 5.800 schillings respectively. The annotation does not mention the name of the buyer, but we can claim with great certainty that the purchase at that auction was realized by Ervin Weiss, considering his multiple relations with the auction house Glückselig. Although it has been housed in the Strossmayer Gallery since the year 1952, the painting A port in Holland by painter Jacobus Storck from Amsterdam is still mentioned in contemporary literature with its sales record from 1927, and without any mention of its current location.⁸¹

The back of the painting Prodigal son by Flemish painter Christoffel van der Laemen bears several markings, which are, however, badly preserved. One of them is similar to the marking of the Austrian Bundesdenkmalamt through which the Federal service for the protection of monuments approved the export of artworks from Austrian territory between 1923 and 1934. Since not all parts of the label are clearly legible, we can only connect the painting with the Austrian art market of the time through conjecture. What we can identify is the marking of the Weiss Collection: a round blue stamp with »ERVIN WEISS ZAGREB« in white letters and the red number 414 in the middle, which Weiss usually used to mark the backs of his artworks.

Slika Ponte dei tre archi potjeće iz zbirke Iginija Calligarisa, talijanskog antikvara djelatnoga na području Hrvatske neposredno prije i tijekom Drugoga svjetskog rata.⁸² U Zagrebu je Calligaris bio u kontaktu s tadašnjim direktorima Strossmayerove galerije i Muzeja za umjetnost i obrt, Arturom Schneiderom i Vladimirom Tkalcíćem, restauratoricom Stanislavom Deklevom i tajnikom Društva prijatelja Strossmayerove galerije Benkom Horvatom.⁸³ Izgleda da je posebno blisko surađivao sa zagrebačkim kolezionarom i numizmatičarom Hinkom Ledererom, kod kojega je pohranio određeni broj svojih umjetnina.⁸⁴

Uspostavom Nezavisne Države Hrvatske zbirka Hinka Lederera biva transferirana iz Gipsoteke grada Zagreba, kamo ju je prethodno bio pohranio sam vlasnik, u Muzej za umjetnost i obrt, zajedno s Calligarisovim umjetninama koje su se kod njega nalazile.⁸⁵ Rječit primjer intenzivnih nastojanja tadašnjega režima da prikupi pohranjene i/ili izvlaštene umjetnine u Državnome muzeju za umjetnost i obrt upravo je transfer Ledererove zbirke za koji su bili poduzeti posebni koraci »budući da su jedino državni muzeji ovlašteni, da takove zbirke čuvaju«.⁸⁶

Po završetku rata, na temelju odluke Kotarskog suda za grad Zagreb od 20. travnja 1954., pohranjena zbirka vraćena je Hinku Ledereru.⁸⁷ Slika Ponte dei tre archi potom je od Lederera otkupljena za Strossmayerovu galeriju.⁸⁸

Slika je inačica danas izgubljene slike Francesca Guardija, proslavljenoga slikara venecijanskih veduta. Njegov je opus, kao i djela njegovih brojnih sljedbenika i oponašatelja, temeljito obradio talijanski povjesničar umjetnosti Antonio Morassi.⁸⁹ Upravo se i na neke njegove ekspertize poziva Calligaris sastavljući popis umjetnina koje je pohranio kod Lederera.⁹⁰ U tom je popisu ova slika određena kao djelo »kasnije Guardijeve škole«. Natpis »Ponga?« na poleđini okvira slike upućuje na Guardijeva oponašatelja Giuseppea Pongu (1856. – 1925.).⁹¹ O Morassijevu interesu za kasnije inačice Guardijevih kompozicija, odnosno za slikare oponašatelje Guardijeva načina svjedoče brojne fotografije djela Guardijevih epigona koje je prikupio, a danas se čuvaju u arhivu venecijanskog Sveučilišta Ca' Foscari.

The painting Ponte dei tre archi comes from the collection of Igino Calligaris, Italian antiques dealer active in the Croatian area immediately before and during the Second World War.⁸² In Zagreb, Calligaris was in contact with the directors of the Strossmayer Gallery and Museum of Arts and Crafts at the time, Artur Schneider and Vladimir Tkalčić, restorer Stanislava Dekleva and secretary of the Society of Friends of the Strossmayer Gallery, Benko Horvat.⁸³ It seems that he cooperated the closest with Hinko Lederer, an art collector and numismatist from Zagreb, with whom he had stored a certain number of his artworks.⁸⁴

With the establishment of the Independent State of Croatia, the collection of Hinko Lederer was transferred from Zagreb's Gypotheque, where it had previously been stored by the owner himself, to the Museum of Arts and Crafts, along with Calligaris' artworks that Lederer was in possession of at the time.⁸⁵ The transfer of Lederer's collection presents an illustrative example of the strong efforts by the government regime of the time to gather stored and/or expropriated artworks in the State museum of arts and crafts, as special steps were taken in order to achieve this »since only state museums are authorized to safeguard these kinds of collections«.⁸⁶

After the end of the war, the stored collection was returned to Hinko Lederer based on the decree of the Kotar court of justice sent to the City of Zagreb on 20th April 1954.⁸⁷ The painting Ponte dei tre archi was then bought from Lederer for the Strossmayer Gallery.⁸⁸

The painting is a version of the lost work of Francesco Guardi, famous painter of Venetian landscapes. His oeuvre, as well as the works of his many followers and imitators, was thoroughly analyzed by Italian art historian Antonio Morassi.⁸⁹ Calligaris refers to some his expert opinions when compiling the list of artworks he had stored with Lederer.⁹⁰ On that list, this painting is defined as the work of »later school of Guardi«. The label that reads »Ponga?« on the back of the painting's frame indicates Guardi's imitator, Giuseppe Ponga (1856 – 1925).⁹¹ Morassi's interest for later versions of Guardi's compositions, and for the painters who impersonated his style, is testified to by numerous photographs of the works of Guardi's followers that he had collected, and that are today kept in the archives of the Venetian Ca' Foscari University.

U vezi vašeg dopisa br. 531/1954. od 5.marta 1954., a u predmetu slike Francesco Guardi, Venecija, koju potražuje u svom postupku pred Kotarskim sudom Lederer Hinko, izvješćujmo slijedeće:

Tražena slika nalazi se izložena u VI. dvorani Stare galerije /Majstori kasnog baroka/ pod imx rednim brojem 133, a upisana je u katalog umjetnina, vlasništva Stare galerije pod inv. brojem

SG-4, Sljedbenik Francesca de' Guardi, Venecijanski motiv ulje, platno, v.0,433 m, š.0,200 m/ sa oznakom u rubrici "opaska" -"KOMZ".

Kako se u arhivu Stare galerije, (koja je nalazi u pohrani u Staroj galeriji, a seže zaključno do 1945. godine) nema nikakvih pobližih podataka o toj slici, stavio se kustos Stare galerije u vezu sa Muzejem za Umjetnost i Obrt, koji je prije vratio raspodjelu KOMZ. U razgovoru da tijevim direktorom Muzeja prof. Tkalićem, sažnao je kustos slijedeće:

Tražena slika Francesco Guardi je nije bila hikada u sklopu KOMZ, nego je bila dao zaplijenjena imovine Židova za viđene NDH, i kao takva dostupala u MUO na pohranu. Bivši direktor Stare galerije prof. Babić pregleđao je prilikom novog postavljanja i preuređivanja Stare galerije godine 1947. sve slike u spomenutom suzetu, te je odabrao i spomenutu sliku, kao i još neke slike, vlasništvo Muzeja za Umjetnost i Obrt, koje su kao posudjene umjetnine izložene u dvoranama Stare galerije. O toj primopredaji postoji opasian zapisnik, koji se vjerojatno mora nalaziti u sklopu tadašnje arhive Stare galerije, koja se međutim ne nalazi u pohrani u uredovnici Stare galerije. Osim toga se zadnjiji zanjenik direktora Muzeja za umjetnost i Obrt, prof.dr. Ivan Bach, podrobno bavi čitavim predmetom vršenja umjetnina, koje traži svojim postupkom Lederer Hinko, te je i s tim pitanjem upoznat, pošto se spomenuti akt nalazi isto i u arhivi istog Muzeja.

The donation of Ante Topić Mimara to the Strossmayer Gallery

Kolekcionar Ante Topić Mimara (1898. – 1987.) svoju je sakupljačku djelatnost razvio na njemačkome tržištu umjetnina u vremenu nacističkoga režima. Do godine 1948. u svoju je zbirku okupio barem stotinu i pedeset skulptura, slika i predmeta umjetničkoga obrta. Dio te zbirke poslan je 1948./1949. godine iz Berlina i Praga u Jugoslaviju. Spletom okolnosti – prvenstveno političkih – umjetnine su tada bile disperzirane u više državnih rezidencija i institucija u Zagrebu i Beogradu.⁹² Istovremeno, Topić dobiva jugoslavensku diplomatsku putovnicu i započinje rad na poslijeratnim restitucijama umjetnina u Central Collecting Pointu u Münchenu.⁹³ Nakon dvogodišnje suradnje, 1951. godine prekida odnose s političkim vrhom Federativne Narodne Republike Jugoslavije i u više se navrata seli svjetom nastavljajući sakupljati umjetnine.

Sredinom 1960-ih Topić aktualizira pitanje smještaja umjetnina iz svoje zbirke ranije dopremljenih u Jugoslaviju. To je rezultiralo sklapanjem darovnoga ugovora sa Strossmayerovom galerijom 1967. godine i uključivanjem dotada disperziranih umjetnina u zbirni fond Galerije u nekoliko faza do 1974. godine.

Prva, najopsežnija skupina umjetnina preuzeta je u Galeriju 1968. godine iz državne rezidencije u Visokoj ulici u Zagrebu. Među njima je pristigla i slika Preljubnica pred Kristom, koja je od trenutka ulaska u Galeriju zauzela važno mjesto u stalnome postavu u dvorani posvećenoj talijanskoj visokoj renesansi, gdje je i danas izložena.⁹⁴

Slika Preljubnica pred Kristom stara je kopija kompozicije ferrarskoga renesansnoga majstora Ortolana iz Courtauld Gallery u Londonu.⁹⁵ Jedna je od slika koje je na berlinskome tržištu između 1938. i 1948. godine Ante Topić Mimara nabavio od trgovca umjetnina Konrada Straußa (1899. – 1978.).⁹⁶ Uz naljepnice toga trgovca, na poledini slike sačuvan je niz oznaka na temelju kojih je moguće rekonstruirati i raniju provenijenciju slike: tijekom prve polovine 19. stoljeća nalazila se na području Milanskoga Vojvodstva, a dva stoljeća ranije, između 1625. i 1649. godine, na dvoru kralja Charlesa I. u Londonu.⁹⁷

Art collector Ante Topić Mimara (1898 – 1987) developed his collecting activities on the German art market during the Nazi regime. By the year 1948, he had gathered at least one hundred and fifty sculptures, paintings, and arts and crafts objects into his collection. A part of this collection was sent from Berlin and Prague to Yugoslavia in 1948/1949. Through a turn of events – mainly of the political kind – the artworks were then dispersed throughout numerous state residences and institutions in Zagreb and Belgrade.⁹² At the same time, Topić acquired a Yugoslavian diplomatic passport and began working on the post-war restitution of artworks at the Central Collecting Point in Munich.⁹³ After a two-year collaboration, he terminated his relationship with the political heads of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia in 1951, and started to move around the world, continuing his art collecting activities.

In the mid-1960s, Topić actualized the subject of housing those artworks from his collection that had previously been transported to Yugoslavia. What followed was a conclusion of a donation contract with the Strossmayer Gallery in the year 1967. The donation included all artworks that had been previously dispersed. All were added to the Gallery's holdings in several stages, terminating in the year 1974.

The first, most comprehensive group of artworks was transferred to the Gallery in the year 1968 from the state residence in Zagreb's Visoka Street. Among them was the painting Woman Taken in Adultery, which was given a prominent position in the Gallery's collection from the moment it entered through its doors. It was placed in the exhibit hall dedicated to the High Renaissance, where it still hangs today.⁹⁴

The painting Woman Taken in Adultery is an old copy of a composition created by the renaissance master painter Ortolano from Ferrara, which is housed in

London's Courtauld Gallery.⁹⁵ It is one of the paintings that Ante Topić Mimara acquired on the Berlin art market between 1938 and 1948 from art dealer Konrad Strauß (1899 – 1978).⁹⁶ Along with this art dealer's labels, the back of the painting also contains several preserved markings, on the basis of which we can reconstruct its even earlier provenance: during the first half of the 19th century, it was found in the area of the Duchy of Milan, while two centuries earlier, between 1625 and 1649, it hung in the court of King Charles I in London.⁹⁷

The art market under the wing of the Nazi regime

Slika Pejsaž iz donacije Ante Topića Mimare zabilježena je na njemačkom tržištu umjetnina u prosincu 1940. godine na dražbi održanoj u berlinskoj aukcijskoj kući Hans W. Lange.⁹⁸

Na toj je aukciji bio prodavan poveći broj umjetnina iz kolekcije Jacquesa Goudstikkera (1897. – 1940.), glasovitoga nizozemskog trgovca umjetninama.⁹⁹ Nakon nacističkog osvajanja Nizozemske, Goudstikker je bio primoran 'prodati' svoju tvrtku i kolekciju umjetnina. Uz potporu Hermanna Göringa, tvrtku (i kolekciju) preuzeo je u lipnju 1940. godine njemački bankar i trgovac umjetninama Alois Miedl (1903. – 1990.).¹⁰⁰ Dio Goudstikkerovih umjetnina Göring je odmah prisvojio za vlastitu zbirku, dok je tvrtka kojom je do kraja rata upravljao Miedl zadržavši renomirano ime Kunsthandel Goudstikker nastavila opskrbljivati tržište preostalim Goudstikkerovim, ali i novonabavljenim umjetninama.

U Kunsthandel Goudstikker slika Pejsaž otkupljena je u kolovozu 1940. godine iz jedne od najznačajnijih nizozemskih trgovina umjetnina toga vremena – Kunsthandel D. Katz iz Dierena – te je nekoliko mjeseci kasnije preprodana u Berlinu na dražbi kuće Lange za 5.000 RM.¹⁰¹ Nije moguće utvrditi je li kupac slike tada bio Ante Topić Mimara ili je slika u njegovo vlasništvo dospjela koju godinu kasnije.

Aukcija na kojoj je 1940. godine prodana slika Pejsaž priređena je, kako stoji na naslovnici kataloga, u ime 'neke' berlinske banke (»im Auftrag eines Berliner Bankhauses«). Slične neodređene formulacije koje na njemačkome tržištu umjetnina ratnih godina susrećemo više puta poslužile su Miedlu kao krinka pod kojom je raspačavao umjetnine.¹⁰²

The painting Landscape from the donation of Ante Topić Mimara was recorded on the German art market in December of 1940 at an auction held in the Berlin auction house, Hans W. Lange.⁹⁸

This auction offered a large number of artworks from the collection of Jacques Goudstikker (1897 – 1940), renowned Dutch art dealer.⁹⁹ After the Nazi occupation of Holland, Goudstikker was compelled to 'sell' his company and art collection. With the support of Hermann Göring, his company (and collection) was taken over by German banker and art dealer, Alois Miedl (1903 – 1990), in June of 1940.¹⁰⁰ Some of Goudstikker's artworks were instantly appropriated by Göring for his own collection, while the company, managed by Miedl until the end of the war under the same renowned name, Kunsthandel Goudstikker, continued to supply the market with the rest of Goudstikker's artworks, along with newly acquired ones.

At the Kunsthandel Goudstikker, the painting Landscape was purchased in August of 1940 from one of the most significant Dutch art dealerships of the – Kunsthandel D. Katz from Dieren – and resold in Berlin several months later at an auction organized by the Lange auction house for 5.000 RM.¹⁰¹ It is not possible to determine whether the buyer of the painting at the time was Ante Topić Mimara or whether the painting came into his possession some years later.

The 1940 auction during which Landscape was sold was organized, according to the cover of the catalogue, on behalf of 'some' bank from Berlin (»im Auftrag eines Berliner Bankhauses«). Similar vague wording that we can often find on the German art market during the war years was used by Miedl as a cover for the distribution of artworks.¹⁰²

From private collections through state residences to museum collections

Slika Odmor na bijegu u Egipat tijekom prvih desetljeća 20. stoljeća u dva je navrata zabilježena na umjetničkom tržištu Berlina i oba je puta reproducirana u aukcijskim katalozima.

Godine 1908. ponuđena je kao rad najistaknutijeg renesansnog pejzažista sjevera Joachima Patinira u aukcijskoj kući Lepke na prodaji umjetnina iz zbirke wiesbadenskog teologa i kolezionara prof. dr. Hermanna Wedewera (1852. – 1922.).¹⁰³ Na toj ekskluzivnoj prodaji Wedewer je uz sliku Odmor na bijegu u Egipat ponudio još preko stotinu i pedeset slika starih majstora iz svoje opsežne kolekcije, na čije bogatstvo i razmjer još jasnije ukazuju tri dražbe organizirane u kölnskoj aukcijskoj kući Lempertz nakon njegove smrti.¹⁰⁴ Kasnije je slika dospjela u ruke berlinskoga industrijalca Carla Bechsteina, čija je kolekcija također posmrtno prodavana. S ostalim umjetninama iz Bechsteinove ostavštine slika Odmor na bijegu u Egipat našla se na prodaji održanoj 1930. godine u Antiquitätenhaus Wertheim iz Berlina.¹⁰⁵ Tom je prilikom prodana za 115 RM kao rad Patinirova nešto mlađeg suvremenika Lucasa Gassela.¹⁰⁶

U Strossmayerovu galeriju slika dospjela je kao dio donacije Ante Topića Mimare. U Zagrebu je posveđena 1951. godine na fotografiji kojom je ovjekovječen državnički susret Josipa Broza Tita s predstavnicima britanskoga parlamenta Barbarom Castle i Richardom Crossmanom. Serije službenih fotografija Titova protokola potvrđuju smještaj niza Topićevih slika u državnim rezidencijama tijekom 1950-ih i 1960-ih godina. Kao dio svoje zbirke Topić je sliku Odmor na bijegu u Egipat prepoznao u državnoj rezidenciji u Zagrebu, te je potom pridružena djelima iz njegove donacije i uključena u zbirni fond Strossmayerove galerije 1974. godine.¹⁰⁷

Propitivanje atribucije zabilježeno još na berlinsko-me tržištu tijekom prve polovine 20. stoljeća do danas nije riješeno, no određene srodnosti s Patinirovim djelima dopuštaju smještanje slike Odmor na bijegu u Egipat u krug njegova djelovanja.

During the first decades of the 20th century, the painting Rest on the flight to Egypt was recorded twice on the art market of Berlin. On both occasions it was reproduced in auction catalogues.

In the year 1908, it was offered as the work of the most notable renaissance landscape artist of the North, Joachim Patinir, at the auction house Lepke, at the auction of prof. Hermann Wedewer, PhD (1852 – 1922), a theologian and art collector from Wiesbaden.¹⁰³ At this exclusive auction, along with the painting Rest on the flight to Egypt, Wedewer also offered over one hundred and fifty Old Master paintings from his vast collection. The value and scale of this collection is illustrated by a further three auctions organized in the Lempertz auction house in Köln after Wedewer's death.¹⁰⁴ Later on, the painting landed in the hands of Berlin industrialist, Carl Bechstein, whose collection was also posthumously sold. The painting Rest on the flight to Egypt showed up again with the rest of the artworks from Bechstein's collection at an auction held in 1930 at the Antiquitätenhaus Wertheim in Berlin.¹⁰⁵ On this occasion, it was sold for 115 RM as the work of Patinir's somewhat younger contemporary, Lucas Gassel.¹⁰⁶

It arrived in the Strossmayer Gallery as part of the donation of Ante Topić Mimara. It was verified in Zagreb in the year 1951 on a photograph that commemorates the state meeting of Josip Broz Tito and representatives of the British Parliament, Barbara Castle and Richard Crossman. Series of official photographs of Tito's protocol confirm the placement of an array of Topić's paintings in various state residences during the 1950s and 1960s. As a part of his collection, Topić recognized the painting Rest on the flight to Egypt in a state residence in Zagreb, after which it was added to the artworks from his collection that had been donated, and included into the holdings of the Strossmayer Gallery in the year 1974.¹⁰⁷

The questioning of its attribution started on the Berlin art market during the first half of the 20th century, and continues to this day. However, certain similarities with Patinir's style allow for the placement of Rest on the flight to Egypt into the circle of his influence.

Par skulptura razdvojen između Strossmayerove galerije i Muzeja Mimara ovom je izložbom prvi put ujedinjen nakon transfera Topićeve zbirke u Jugoslaviju kasnih 1940-ih. Skulptura Sveta Kunigunda bila je među umjetninama koje su iz Praga otpremljene u Beograd, odakle je 1969. godine prispjela u Strossmayerovu galeriju. Sveti Henrik ostao je u Topićevu posjedu i s kasnjom je bitno opsežnijom donacijom njegove zbirke dospio u Muzej Mimara.

Topić je držao da skulpture predstavljaju kralja i Bogorodicu.¹⁰⁸ Njihova međusobna povezanost pokidana je već takvom identifikacijom, a memorija o postojanju »druge« figure posve je izgubljena razdvajanjem skulptura u dvije muzejske zbirke.

Srodnii tehnički, formalno-stilski i ikonografski elementi potvrđuju isto izvorište dviju skulptura. Kristalne polukugle i atributi (vladarske jabuke, žezlo i mač) ove skulpture jasno određuju kao biste-relikvijare kanoniziranoga vladarskog para. U kompleksu srednjovjekovne hagiografije, figure je moguće poistovjetiti s otonskim carem Henrikom II. i caricom Kunigundom Luksemburškom.¹⁰⁹ Vojvodski šešir umjesto carske krune, čini se, odražava lokaliziraniju vladarsku poziciju Henrika II., koji je prije krunidbe za cara, a i kasnije tijekom jednoga perioda, nosio titulu bavarskoga vojvode. Upravo je na bavarskom prostoru bilo izraženije čašćenje toga para, a tome krugu skulpture pripadaju i stilskim osobinama južnonjemačke kiparske produkcije kasnog 15. stoljeća.

During this exhibition, a pair of sculptures divided between the Strossmayer Gallery and the Mimara Museum was reunited for the first time since the transfer of the Topić Collection to Yugoslavia in the late 1940s. The sculpture Saint Cunigund of Luxembourg was among the artworks that arrived to Belgrade from Prague, and then from Belgrade to the Strossmayer Gallery in 1969. Saint Henry remained in Ante Topić Mimara's ownership, arriving to the Mimara Museum with a later, and much larger donation from his collection.

Topić believed that the sculptures represented a king and the Madonna.¹⁰⁸ Their mutual connection was severed by this kind of identification, and the memory of the existence of 'another' figure was completely lost by the separation of the sculptures and their placement into two museum collections.

Related technical, formal, stylistic, and iconographic elements confirm the two sculptures' mutual origin. Crystal hemispheres and attributes (a ruler's orb, scepter and sword) clearly define these sculptures as reliquary busts of the canonized pair of rulers. Within the system of medieval hagiography, the figures can be identified as Ottonian Emperor Henry II and Empress Cunigund of Luxembourg.¹⁰⁹ A ducal hat instead of a crown seems to mirror the more localized governing position held by Henry II, who, prior to being crowned as emperor and later during one period of time, held the title of Duke of Bavaria. The Bavarian area was precisely where the veneration of this couple was most pronounced. Furthermore, this is also the circle of influence to which the sculptures belong based on the stylistic characteristics of South Germany's sculptural production of the late 15th century.

Epilog

Dana 22. ožujka 2020. razorni potres pogodio je središte grada Zagreba. Mnoge kulturne ustanove teško su oštećene. Stradala je i palača Hrvatske akademije znanosti i umjetnosti, izgrađena za smještaj zbirke starih majstora biskupa Josipa Jurja Strossmayera. Otvaranje za javnost biskupove galerije slika na drugome katu palače, čija je gradnja bila započeta 1877. godine na istaknutome mjestu današnjega Donjega grada, umnogome oblikovanoga upravo ovom zgradom, tada je bilo odgođeno upravo zbog potresa koji je Zagreb pogodio 1880. godine.

Od otvorenja za javnost 1884. godine, predstavljanjem inicialne donacije biskupa Josipa Jurja Strossmayera, Galerija koja danas nosi ime svoga utemeljitelja tijekom više od 135 godina postojanja kontinuiranu djelatnost temelji prvenstveno na stalnome postavu zbirke europskog slikarstva starih majstora (od 15. do 18./19. st.). Stalni postav Gale- rije bio je nezaobilazno mjesto prvih susreta s umjetninama proteklih stoljeća i/ili pak »poligon« za specijalističku izobrazbu novih generacija stručnjaka na području povijesti umjetnosti i srodnih disciplina.

U razdoblju koje slijedi predstoji pažljiva obnova zgrade Hrvatske akademije znanosti i umjetnosti te osmišljavanje novoga stalnoga postava koji treba omogućiti fleksibilnu i dinamičnu dodatnu interpretaciju i kontekstualizaciju izložene građe. U tome ćemo, na tragu svojih dosadašnjih istraživačkih nastojanja, veliku pozornost posvetiti pronalaženju modela za primjerenu prezentaciju provenijencije izloženih umjetnina.

Epilogue

On March 22nd, 2020, a devastating earthquake shook the center of Zagreb. Many cultural institutions have been heavily damaged. The palace that houses the Croatian Academy of Sciences and Arts, originally built to hold the Old Master collection of Bishop Josip Juraj Strossmayer, has also suffered damages. The public opening of the Bishop's collection of paintings on the second floor of the palace, whose erection began in the year 1877 at a prominent location in Zagreb's Lower Town, in many ways shaped by this building, had been postponed precisely because of an earthquake that hit Zagreb in the year 1880.

Since its opening to the public in the year 1884 with the presentation of the initial donation of Bishop Josip Juraj Strossmayer, the Gallery that bears its founder's name has during its more than 135-year existence based its continuous activity primarily on its permanent collection: paintings of European Old Masters (from the 15th to the 18th/19th century). The Gallery's permanent collection has been an inevitable place of introduction to artworks from centuries long gone and/or a training ground for the specialist education of new generations of experts in Art History and its related disciplines.

In the following period of time we are faced with careful reconstructions to the palace of the Croatian Academy of Sciences and Arts, as well as the cautious conceptualization of a new permanent display, which will have to enable a flexible and dynamic additional interpretation and contextualization of the exhibited artworks. Following the trail of our present research efforts, we will approach this task with an added focus on finding appropriate forms and methods for presenting the provenance of exhibited artworks.
